What is School Press Club?

It is a fun and simple tool for creating school magazines, class newsletters and yearbooks.

Create

Create a school newspaper or blog in the online application. Teachers can also engage and provide with feedback online.

School Press Club helps students develop skills in how to work with information, how to write text, how to edit a picture or photo.

Collaborate

A core function of the School Press Club project is simple communication between club members and if set-up with the teacher.

The teacher can attach comments to the draft texts. All members of the editorial staff have the opportunity to communicate in the chat - individually and in groups.

Publish

School Press Club offers both online and in print. It is a simple and easy to use tool.

For each issue of a newspaper, newsletter, yearbook, etc. you can choose from a number of different templates.

On the school's online newspaper page, readers can vote for and comment on favorite articles.

Who to edit?

authors - all enrolled in the editorial office

editor-in-chief - teacher/student responsible for the entire Project editor - cooperates with the editor-in-chief, responsible for the final form of the texts graphic designer - cooperates with the editor-in-chief and editor, is responsible for the final form of the magazine correspondent - only submits the text for publication (eg once a year) proofreader - checks texts before sending them to the printer on the language page photographer - adds photos to individual topics illustrator - draws illustration pictures, comics ...

Why join School Press Club?

School Press Club is simple tool which everyone can use to create their own newsletters, school magazine, information for parents, gift newspapers, school blogs etc.

The whole class can get involved. Authors / Editors can complete the issue online or via mobile

The system automatically generates an online version of the magazine and a printed form can also be provided. Each issue can be exported to pdf and pre-announced joint deadlines can be used for color printing.

There are many template designs to choose from. You can also create newsletters for parents, flyers, or just blogs. also each class can have their own newspaper.

In primary schools, newspapers are created not only in the second grade, but also in the first grade. Younger children like to present their own pictures and poems or short texts. Creating a newspaper together supports creativity, communication and group work skills.

In secondary schools, students often run a school newspaper themselves and, thanks to the environment offered by the School Press Club, they are able to cooperate across grades.

Classmates who are on internships abroad for a year regularly contribute to the magazine.

you can organize writing competitions in various categories, such as the best article, comic, reportage or interview.

The winners can be presented not only on the School Press Club website, but also in other print and online media.
